YOUR WEEKLY BIRD 2

September 17, 2023

The pictures in this issue are by Sandy Sorkin.

Photographed through my kitchen window.

American goldfinches are beautiful with brilliant colors reflecting the sunlight filtering through our spruce tree. I can't recommend shooting through windows, but every now and then you get a sharp image. I think we have three birds visiting the white niger/thistle seed sock. One couple dines together and periodically scare off a hungry interloping bachelor male. My expectation is that I will also get a nice turnout from pine siskins this year. Another benefit is that if you give the birds a never-ending supply of seeds, they don't eat the petals off the flowers in the garden.
